candelas lumens and lux pdf

The lux (symbol: lx) is the SI derived unit of illuminance and luminous emittance, measuring luminous flux per unit area. It is equal to one lumen per square metre. In photometry, this is used as a measure of the intensity, as perceived by the human eye, of light that hits or passes through a surface. It is analogous to the radiometric unit watt per square metre, but with the power at each ...

Relationships between luminous intensity, luminous flux, and illuminance. If a source emits a known luminous intensity I_v (in candelas) in a well-defined cone, the total luminous flux Φ_v in lumens is given by $\Phi_v = I_v \cdot 2\pi [1 - \cos(A/2)]$, where A is the radiation angle of the lamp—the full vertex angle of the emission cone. For example, a lamp that emits 590 cd with a radiation ...

I have both. I bought a couple of LED spotlight globes to try in a ceiling mounted system over a desk. I am very happy with them (some 'engineers' in another recent thread on LED's have real problems accepting that simple statement, but whatever....), although the light is perhaps a bit 'stark'.
